“ Hello , I'm Christopher Anderson I was injured at the United States post office . And I am a patient where Patric worked I could not wait to see him there . Hey brought joy , knowledge, and a smile it seems everywhere he went . He would always leave me smiling and more at ease every time I saw him . So one day I was going to give back to him some joy that he has given me . So I made the the wooden sword that had scripture psalm 23 and he proudly displayed it to the left side of his desk . My friend passed on my birthday and it was a huge lose to everyone his office called me to tell me he passed. I will always have a place in my heart for Patric. And I will miss him the rest of my time here . But on a positive note, Patric will be waiting for all of us in heaven , I can guarantee it. I have one last thing to say to Patric I love you , and I will miss you greatly.

“Patrick was an incredibly empathetic and self-aware person. He was somebody who took the hard things that had happened to him throughout his life and used them to grow, even if it was a bumpy process sometimes. In the year and a half where we were dating long distance, it was a privilege to see him open up and talk about himself (something he takes time to do). He was full of love and no shortness of empathy for the people around him which is why so many of his patients adored him. He was often given presents by the people he helped, even though he'd always insist it wasn't necessary. He made people feel seen, heard, valued, and cared for — something I will never forget. Some people listen to talk, and some people listen to listen. He was the latter. I hope everyone who knew him takes that love and shares it with others in his honor. He was a beacon of kindness in a challenging world, and a reminder of the good that exists in people. I always made sure to tell him that I loved him— trying to listen to him as well. On the few occasions we got to spend time in person, I always held his hand and cuddled up to him. I let him know how beautiful he was, and I will always miss him.
